Train Performs at The VOICE

Though they were set to perform at Chastain Park Amphitheatre just a few hours later, two members of the band Train made time for more than a "Driveby" visit at The VOICE Friday, Sept. 7. Pat Monahan, lead singer, and Jimmy Stafford, lead guitarist, dropped by to answer questions from patients, sing a couple of recent hits and sign autographs. While chatting with Wendy Threatt, Program Coordinator for The VOICE, Pat shared that the band felt honored when Kate Middleton and Prince William chose to use their song "Marry Me" during the royal wedding festivities in London last spring. Pat also shared that he likes to tour in the United States because it's easier for his family—including his three kids—to join him on the road. Pat and Jimmy invited guests in The VOICE to join them in the chorus of "Hey, Soul Sister" and finished with an acoustic version of the recently released "Driveby."

The band is set to make an appearance on Sesame Street later this month.
