Rehab at Mount Zion, Cobb and Fayette Hold Successful Fun Day for Patients

Smiling faces were abundant as several hundred patients and their families enjoyed the inaugural Family Fun Days held recently at Children's Healthcare at Mount Zion, Children's Healthcare of Cobb and Children's Healthcare of Fayette. Conducted by each facility's staff and dedicated volunteers, the events allowed Outpatient Rehabilitation Program patients to forget the daily struggles they face and "just be kids."

Patients, siblings and parents enjoyed a wide range of games, including inflatable castles and slides, a sensory tent adventure, face painting, arts and crafts, an obstacle course and a dunk tank. Every selected activity could be customized to the individual child's abilities, making each event a special day for the families in attendance.

"Due to the accommodations needed for the child who is a rehabilitation patient, it can be challenging to participate in family outings that provide the accommodation the child requires while still ensuring the needs of siblings are met in an enjoyable fashion," said Claire Creech, Rehabilitation Manager at Children's Healthcare at Mount Zion. "This event is run by staff and volunteers who are able to meet the special needs of the patient, as well as provide engaging activities for other children to play."

Staff members enjoyed seeing families who share similar challenges watch their children participate in activities together. A 3-year-old boy who is unable to walk was able to bounce in the inflatable castle, moving independently alongside other children. Another child was thrilled to be able to attempt to dunk a staff member in the dunk tank, tossing a ball at an adjusted wheelchair-level target. Other popular stations included adapted skateboarding, a pottery wheel and the opportunity to meet a firefighter.

"It is important for Children's to continue these activities, because many of these children are limited in their abilities to participate in community events," stated Karin Shah, Rehabilitation Manager at Children's Healthcare of Fayette. "We provided activities, such as adapted skateboarding, that allow these kids to try things that would normally be unavailable to them."

At Children's Healthcare of Cobb, Manager Steven Cummings emphasized to his staff that they made a difference in the lives of the patients and their families. "Daily life for these kids can include not fitting in with their peers, a multitude of doctor visits, frequent hospital stays, intense therapy sessions and the often overwhelming desire for life to just be easier," Cummings told staff members. "Well, for a few hours today, you gave these families the opportunity to forget about all the hardships and simply enjoy life."
