

Stress Management for the Healthcare Professional Seminar

Amidst the uncertainty of an economic downturn and an increasingly frenetic work environment, we often find ourselves overwhelmed by stress. These stressors constitute powerful obstacles to professional and personal self-development. The management, not elimination, of stressors is the most realistic approach to stress management. In particular, managing our response to acute and chronic stressors can form a key component of our professional development by enabling us to meet the expectations of our patients and coworkers in a more productive manner. The adoption of stress management skills also can be a powerful complement to eating healthfully and exercising regularly in the quest for achieving optimal personal and professional wellness.

As part of its emphasis on "Caring for the Caregiver," the CHOICE Professional Development Committee has arranged the special seminar "Stress Management for the Healthcare Professional." The seminar will take place Wednesday, Dec. 3, from 9 a.m. until noon, in Building 1680, Classroom 5, at The Park. Dr. Adolph Casal, Director, Children's Consult Psychiatry, Anne Peacock, Director, Children's Family Support Services, and Jeanne Merdek, Peachford Behavioral Health System, will present tips and strategies to manage acute and chronic stress at home and in the workplace.

You must register for the seminar in Aspen. Type "stress" in the searchbox.

The CHOICE Professional Development Committee looks forward to seeing you and to serving your professional development needs in the future.
